1. On 23 September approximately 200 North Korean troops were on the high ground approximately 1 mile southwest of Noryangjin (126-56, 37-30) which is about 3 miles east of Yongdung-po (126-54, 37-31). During the night of 22 September and the morning of 23 September, a large (undetermined) number of North Korean troops were moving southeast from Noryangjin along the Han River bank.
2. On the morning of 23 September, there were approximately 500 North Korean infantry troops with an undetermined number of machine guns and mortars in the Mapo area of Seoul (approximately 126-57, 37-32). A large (undetermined) number of North Korean troops were in the Chongun-jong area of northern Seoul (approximately 126-58-20, 37-35-10). A large (undetermined) number of North Korean troops were in fox holes and trenches in Changchundan (approximately 127-01, 37-33-25) and Itaewon-jong (126-59-30, 37-32), areas of southeastern Seoul.
3. As of 2 September, regular North Korean troops in Seoul were being replaced by so-called "Volunteer" Army troops. Regular troops were being sent to undetermined areas.
